

After Stock-Taking Prices.

Up on the banks of the Merrimac, where orders are reckoned by the hundred cases, we're known as bold buyers. In the importing house district of New York the big concerns consider us among the largest handlers of French and English Cottons on the American continent. Throughout the breadth of the land merchants regard with awe the daring manner in which we establish, year after year, a newer and a lower price standard for Cotton stuffs. Our way of business is the "big" way. We're giants 'mong the giants. Our Wash Goods purchases are not overshadowed by a half dozen American concerns. Quantity buying means successful selling, because it means a lower buying price and a consequently lower retail price. Now that lower price has been cut to the lowest ever named by man. At the season's start we would willingly have paid twice as much as these prices for our stock.

Choice of All French Organdies, 10c.

Organdies that were 25c, and 35c, a yard and that are 25c, and 35c, a yard at every other store in the city. Not a pattern that isn't as good as another, not an obtrusive coloring or an inartistic effect. They're triumphs of the shuttles. Over in Paris the shops today are getting a franc for the 25c. qualities. Every yard was a stranger to our store until this spring, for styles never linger here longer than a single season. A few pieces of 19c. French goods share the same prices as the more sheer qualities. From now on we know no distinction in their value. THEIR PRICE IS......

Choice 25c. Imported Dimities, 12 2c.

We might pack them up with camphor balls and get 25c. again next season, for such downright daintiness of texture and rare combining of color bid defiance to the efforts of the next ten years. These Dimities are perfect. The mill that loomed them over in St. Gaul would turn buyer for the once and take every vard of them back again at such a price. But you are destined for this rare bargain bit, and any piece of fine Dimity goes at rare bargain bit, and any piece of fine Dimity goes at.

50 pieces Fine Plain Lawns, 7½c.

There will be fifty pieces of Plain Color Lawns on the first floor tables Monday that have just escaped the confinement of the packing box. Ordered early, they were shipped by mistake to Rochester, N. Y., and have only been in the store a week. The quality is superb. Full of stability, yet as sheer as a web. Among the colors, which will never change so long as the days dawn, are navy blue, light 71/2C.

50c. Fine Silk Mull, 19c.

Ten different pieces of Figured Silk Mull are all that remains of the season's buying. These are even rather short in length. Now there isn't enough of them to last all through the day, and we dare say you'll be disappointed if an afternoon buyer. 1900. The price of these stuffs was 50c.....

All Fancy 50c. Piques, 25c.

Imported as their price hints, and quite a lot to cull over. They are English Piques of varying weight and size of rib, and consist of various striped effects and different plaids. On account of their weight they'll be wearable till the leaves begin to red-

All 10c. and $12\frac{1}{2}$ c. Lawns, 5c.

They were good Lawns for such prices, that's about all we can say about them, save, perhaps, that they are a little better in their wearing and somewhat less crude in color than American lawns generally are. The mourning effects are remarkably soft toned. 100 pieces.....

Odds and Ends of Lawns, 278c. & 378c.

A corporal's guard of about fifty pieces left from over 50 cases. Small wonder that we've made the price small on the survival. Nothing extraordinary about them except the reduction. About the usual run of patterns and colors that one finds sold at 6c. and 8c.

121/2c. Barnaby Ginghams, 71/2c.

We can boast of a wonderful choice of effects for so late a month as August. We've always a fair stock of these superb goods on hand. They are the finest Ginghams that America produces. # Positively the Last Week of Such Prices.

This coming week will end this sale, as Satilfday is the last day we are allowed to retain 1216 F st. If it is at all possible we will sell everything in the store before that time. We have cut prices down to a mere fraction of what they should be, and all shopworn or slightly marred goods will be sold for next to nothing. If you are skeptical about the goods being worth as much as we say, a very cursory glance at the goods will convince you of the truth. Should you not find what you want at 1216 F st., remember that we carry a tremendous stock of goods at 1226 F st., and that we are making special summer prices.

A LUNAR RAINBOW

An Interesting Phenomenon Witnessed Last Monday Night.

A Rare Occurrence and Probably but Few Actually Observ-'ed It.

Written for The Evening Star.

Last Monday evening everybody that could get out of doors was out trying to get relief from the torrid heat, and as the earth was a source of radiation, the sky was much more attractive, with the moon brilliant and cool-looking; but it is probable that only a small proportion-possibly not mere than an average of one in every hundred of the thousands of people in Washington-saw the very unusual and interesting phenomenon-a lunar rainbow, that appeared in the heavens from a little after 9 o'clock until long after 10.

Everybody has, of course, often seen halos or colored rings around the moon. They appear between us and that luminary They appear between us and that luminary and are, according to their contracted or their expanded condition, considered as signs of approaching rain or of dry weather; but the rainbow, though produced as the haio is, by refraction and reflection of light, is on the opposite side of us from the source of this light and is of much more rare occurrence. It also is of much greater beauty than the commoner phenomenon and its rarity must be accounted for upon the same theory of unknown causes that produce the finest things, with which we are familiar in relation to all the affairs of are familiar in relation to all the affairs of life. The writer had never before but once in his life seen a rainbow at night, and of the three other persons to whose attention he called it and who observed it with him none had ever seen one before.

The moon, at her best, being full at half-past 11 that night, was high in the southeast, and the only clouds visible in her neighborhood were scarcely thick enough to conceal her outline as they scudded across her face. Low in the northwest there was a heavy bank of dark clouds, that did not even give the usual summer night sheen of "heat lightning" or show the effects of an electrical storm that might have been expected from the ugly mood the effects of an electrical storm that might have been expected from the ugly mood they appeared to be in; and it was against these and rearing its arch well up among the peaks of their jagged edge that this dainty, timid creature of etherial beauty was pictured, wasting its charms on an unappreciating world, that might have been delighted with its silent radiance but for the accident that never happened to lead their eyes in its direction. At times it was very faint and may have been overlooked by many whose glance readily detected the clouds in its background; and if the sky behind it had been clear the centrast would scarcely have been strong enough to render the rainbow visible except to an eye making a special search for it.

At first only a short section of the arc was perceptible. It crept cautiously up from the westward, feeling its way, as if afraid of being frightened back into the depths of darkness from which it seemed to come and as if taking time to build its web of gauzy light into the circle prescrib-ed for it by the round orb of its origin. Then, growing bolder, it climbed upward and upward until about three-quarters of the whole are it could have made appeared quite distinctly.

It was difficult to distinguish the colors that we know always appear in the sun's rainbows, and we must take it for granted rainbow, which is always the brighter clearer one, the red is the outer band. If there had been two bows the primary or brighter one with the colors in the usual order would, it seems, surely have been vis-ible, as the one seen was high enough above the horizon at its center, probably thirty degrees, to leave room enough for the pri-mary, which is always the inner, bow when there are two, to appear clear of the earth's circumference. The writer does not, however, know that the moon's light is strong ever, know that the moon's light is strong enough to produce a secondary rainbow, as he has never seen one, but it seems altogether improbable that it should be, since the light of the sun, which is able at best to produce only a dim secondary bow, shines with a brilliancy that is estimated, upon extensive and scientific experiments by Bouguer. Bond and others, to be 300,000 times as powerful as that of the moon. Owing to the rarity of this night phenomenon it is probable that the results of observations of it or of experiments bearing upon its nature are not numerous or reupon its nature are not numerous or re-

Northern lights, shooting stars, comets Northern lights, shooting stars, comets with lustrous tails, and other phenomena that are more or less imperfectly understood are attractive to the vision and interesting, but a lunar rainbow possesses a charm peculiarly its own, that is not surpassed by anything that appears in the heavens—that is to say, in the opinion of the writer. The one of Monday evening was particularly beautiful and fascinating. Unpretentious as a child, modest as a ruswas particularly beautiful and lascinating. Unpretentious as a child, modest as a rustic maiden, pure as the distilled vapor that bore it—with hesitating grace it poised before the eye as if held by magic power in reluctant obedience, wishing to be released that it might respect to the control of the cont that it might return to its wonted seclusion of the Iceland fairy haunts, where, with its sisters, offspring of the moon and the sun, it might revel in a perpetual round of mazes, keeping time to the music of the subares.

Events of the Week Passed in Re-

ONE DAY'S FUN AT NEWPORT

The Marriage Monday Night of Miss Hills and Mr. O'Neill.

OTHER TIMELY TOPICS

Washington weather for the last two lays has justified all the good things which it has hitherto been possible to say about t. The Santiago scorching through which this city has passed during the month of July has been in line with the phenomenal incidents which have characterized the year thus far. With the dawning of peace and the coming of the familiar darkest hour of gloom and doubt which precedes it always, there has also come the word of the near return of our soldier boys to our own shores, and the filling up in home circles of places now vacant. The week has been such an interesting one in great topics, that small details have passed unnoticed. Here the week started with the funeral of the late Mrs. Romero, and of the hundreds of admirers and friends who were able to be present at this last tribute of respect in this community, where the most important period of her life was passed, there were thousands at distant points who sincerely mourn a loving friend and who would have given much to have been permitted this final satisfaction. The same note of sorrow has touched all hearts and her memory will last long in the society of this capital, which she so greatly adorned.

The absence of any desire for formal events of the usual magnificent character of this season of the year at Newport has held its prominent leaders to the simple forms of good comradeship and sociability. Mr. and Mrs. Belmont commenced it one day by a trolley-car picnic with a dinner at a road restaurant. The idea grew until now even if the dinners are house affairs full dress is not considered at ad necessary and rather a mistaken notion. The hot weather may have something to do with this state of affairs but just at the with this state of affairs, but just at the moment it is the popular fad. Social chroniclers are rather inclined to call it a dreary season, but why it should be so with such comfortable views as these prevailing, seems rather strange to the every day idea of having a good time. But Mr. and Mrs. Pelmont made up for any simplicity in the first hospitality by the event to which their friends were bidden yester-day at Grey Craig Park, their country place at Middletown. The cards of invita-tion were to a dinner picnic, but it turned out to be a fete, dinner, vaudeville show, country fair and fireworks display. Para-dise avenue, the first approach to the park, was a blaze of light from end to end, and was a blaze of light from end to end, and the park itself was gorgeously festooned with hundreds of Japanese lanterns. Mrs. Belmont, Mrs. Oelrichs and Mrs. Fish re-ceived their guests in a bower built of lan-terns, while the Fort Adams Band gave a concert. One of the most striking features of the decorations was an American flag planted on the highest elevation in the planted on the highest elevation in the park with changing calcium lights playing upon it. Dinner was served early in the evening, under a red marquee, lighted with numerous amber electric lamps, and at 10 o'clock the beginning of the fete proper was announced by the explosion of a large bomb, followed immediately by an elaborate display of fireworks from a grove on an island in the lake.

A vaudeville show gave two or three an island in the lake.

A vaudeville show gave two or three turns, and when the guests tired of that, they strolled through the grounds and took in the continuous performances given by jugglers, cowboy and cowgirl riders, shooting galleries, fortune tellers and hurdy gurdies. Mr. Truxton Beale, Mrs. John Davis, Miss Bessie Davis, Mr. T. Sandford Beaty, Mr. and Mrs. Paul Andrews, Mrs. and Miss Brice, were some of the guests best known here. best known here.

At Bar Harbor a certain amount of exer cise, and that of a lively description, is absolutely necessary to keep the blood in cir-culation. Dinners and dances thrive, and nature sends balmy sleep under double blankets, the North Atlantic turning its biankets, the North Atlantic turning its coldest shoulder to the mainland at present, while down on the Jersey coast they have been sweltering the past three weeks. At Lenox it has been delightfully cool, but the fashionable colonies of the Berkshires will not stir themselves much socially till the first days of the autumn.

The remnant of society still in town is discussing with much avidity an interesting physiological question. It is whether or not a person can prove mental competency and cite nothing better to support their position than continuous participation in social life. A young woman well known in Washing ton, who recently married without the con-sent and against the wishes of her mother, who excuses her daughter's action by rea-son of unusual mental strain, says that this statement does her great injustice, and has injured her credit. She proves entirely to her own satisfaction, at least, that the win-ter she made her debut in Washington she ter she made her deout in Washington she attended no fewer than forty-four dinner parties, at which she met the leading residents, to say nothing of the balls, the luncheons and other diversions in which she participated. She says she never heard that any of these people considered her unusual or different from others at that time. This history of a first season certainly reveals an excellent physical condition, or she would not have lived to start the second and from the standpoint of health and en-durance, anybody capable of this amount of hard work ought to do better things for humanity that to revel in such small achievements. An interesting event to a large number of friends will be the marriage Monday evening of Miss Pauline Hills, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Hills, to Mr. Arthur A. O'Neill of this city. The ceremony, which will take place at the residence of Mr. L. C. Hills, 909 S street, brother of the bride, will occur at 8 o'clock, and be followed by a reception, to which a large company has been bidden. Mr. John O Neill will attend his brother as best man, and the bride will wear a handsome traveling dress of brown grenadine over pink silk. The house will be prettily decorated with palms and flags, and Miss Pearl Fischell will play the wedding march. After the reception the couple will depart for a trip to the seaside, and will be away from town a week or so. They will then go to house keeping at the Trotwood flats on M be tween 9th and 10th streets. Mr. O'Neill, who is the acting secretary of the board of trade, has a wide acquaintance among business men in this city and enjoys great popularity among them, as he also does in educational circles. He was recently the secretary of the National Educational Association, and the members of the committee upon which he served have presented his bride as a wedding gift with a handsome clock. The bride has received a number of other elegant gifts also. Miss Mary Sullivan, with a party of

First on the Program at Washington Grove Yesterday. Special Correspondence of The Evening Star.

WASHINGTON GROVE, August 5, 1898. Child study was given the right of way in camp today, and all the tabernacle services were pregnant with interest in the spiritual development of the men and women of tomorrow. The sunrise prayer meeting, led by Captain Ripley, struck the keynote of a day of spiritual work. A large congregation of consecrated women gathered at the morning temple service. There was Bible reading by Mrs. Esta Stanley of Missouri Training School. Following this was a prayer and testimony service in the tabernacie, led by Eider Wil-

At 11 o'clock Rev. Stewell Bryant of St. Paul's M. E. Church, Washington, spoke to a large audience upon the potence of the forceful personality of the Christian teacher, choosing for his text Paul's charge to "Timothy, 2d epistle, chap. 2: "Study to show thyself approved of God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly divining the Word of God."

The auditorium was well filled with appreciative listeners at 2 p.m., when Misses Grace Dowling and Watts of Grace Church gathered a band of children on the platform, and gave an object lesson in primary Sunday school teaching. "Hear the Pennies Fall" was sung by the class, after which Miss Watts presented the story of Elijah and Elisha. "God Cares for the Birdle" was made the theme of a talk by Miss Stratton, after which the children joined in singing the catchy rhyme.
